Baccalaureate Transfer Program

English courses cover a range of areas: rhetoric, technical writing, creative writing, media, and literature. Some are required of all transfer students, and others fulfill requirements for vocational degrees. All of the English courses listed below will help you improve your communication skills because they emphasize the comprehension and expression of written language. Being a good communicator will help you be a better student, employee, and media consumer. For example, in Rhetoric II, you will learn research skills that you may need in other courses at Danville Area Community College or at a four-year university. If you plan a future as an English teacher or professional writer, the courses listed below will get you started toward those goals. If you just like to write—poetry or short stories, for example—Creative Writing offers a workshop atmosphere to share your writing with others.
