Footprints of Those Colorful Vikings Tuesday, September 17

Vikings were the terror of Europe around the year 1,000 AD. Visit their homeland of Norway, Denmark, and Sweden with trips to areas they raided. York, England has a popular tourist destination of a recreated Viking village at the time Vikings controlled England. Along with their travels, we will learn why they started raiding and catch up with why they stopped. Did you know William, Duke of Normandy was a Viking? The current queen of England has some Viking blood.

New Zealand and Hawaii – History formed them both Thursday, October 10

The Maoris lived in New Zealand for a thousand years before the British came. The early years of colonization were turbulent. Today's culture reflects both groups. We will see a Maori village built near hot spots of boiling steam, which they use for cooking. See wood carvings similar to North American totem poles. Earthquakes are common in New Zealand. In Hawaii, we will visit the USS Arizona Memorial, petroglyphs in lava, and walk on the cooled lava flows

Antarctica, Land of Snow and Penguins Thursday, November 14

Antarctica is a continent where penguins and seals, not people, are the natives. See seven types of penguins as we travel to Antarctica and surrounding islands. Visit the Falklands and South Georgia with its whaling village of Grytviken abandoned in 1967 after processing 1/2 million whales. The famous explorer Earnest Shackleton is buried here. Seals, Minke whales, and Humpback whales play around our boat. Our ship avoided majestic icebergs while moving slowly through slush to avoid being frozen in.
